

ORDER OF SELECTION

Justification for the Order of Selection

It is the intent of the Georgia Department of Labor (GDOL)/Vocational Rehabilitation (VR) Program to serve any and all persons in the state who are eligible for vocational rehabilitation services. Because of limited resources, the Georgia agency has determined that vocational rehabilitation services cannot be provided to all individuals with disabilities in the state that apply for services.

An Order of Selection has been implemented within the state to ensure that individuals with the most significant disabilities are selected first for the provision of vocational rehabilitation services, those with significant disabilities second, and then to all other eligible individuals in descending order of the severity of their disabilities. Elements that relate to the severity of disability are the only elements used in Georgia Order of Selection. Five categories are open.

Outcome and Service Goals, Time Frames, and Service Costs

The table below displays the number of individuals eligible to receive vocational rehabilitation services, the associated cost of services and length of time from Status 10 (development of an IPE) to Status 26 (closed successfully rehabilitated), based on the order of selection.
